

Gen. Wood Silent on Offer Magazine Made to Him.

CAMP FORTSON, Kans., Feb. 6.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood, when asked today about the offer from the Metropolitan Magazine that he become contributing editor, refused either to admit or deny he had received the offer.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils to Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, sniffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.—Advt.

Losing in a Friendly Game Is All Right, Says Nathan; Being Held Up's All Wrong

It Was a Lively Half Hour in Sam's Shoe Store, and Max Was a Winner There as Well as in Essex Market Court.

Nathan Heiser has no objection to losing a little money in a friendly game of poker, but he disapproved highly of the alleged attempt of Nathan W. Heiser, a "high man" in the pastebored conflict, to hold him up in the hallway and forcibly take away the surviving roll.

A witness for Max took the stand at the Essex Market Court.

"You see, Your Honor, we were having a little game in Sam Binnick's shoe store."

"How long did it last?"

"Half an hour. We were afraid of his wife, so we beat it."

"Did you see the defendant take Nathan's money?"

"No, sir."

According to Nathan, he had $45 and lost $15 in the game. As he went downstairs, Max grabbed him by the throat and completed a prosperous night's work by annexing the $30.

"How about it, Max?" asked His Honor.

"Nathan came into the game with $4 and lost it. Then he went out and booked a chain for $15, came back and lost that. Finally he sold me two tickets for the second balcony of a Bowery show for $1, and lost that. Then he grabbed me and tore my vest."

Max produced the tickets as evidence.

The court agreed that it had been an expensive night for Nathan, even without the alleged robbery, but decided that Max's invasion of Nathan's pocketbook was confined to the card table, and the case was dismissed.

The average pushcart peddler who appears in court for violation of the city ordinances is either contrite, apologetic, or has some family troubles with which to divert the mind of the Judge from the case.

But Marcus Morris broke the record yesterday at Essex Market Court, and conducted his case with the verve of a fiery lawyer.

"I was selling my onions, when I saw the cop," began Marcus.

"He asked me for my license, but I showed it to him? I did not. I was onto his tricks. He wanted to pinch me, and then where would I be without my license? I guess he didn't get it."

"We went to the station house, and I got roughed up something awful, and right before the lost-ment. Never said a word, he didn't. Then when I got out of the station, I found that somebody had pinched all my onions—at least most of them. Here I lost my onions, my trade, and am in jail here, just because the cop wanted to pinch my license. But he didn't get it."

"How about it, officer?" asked His Honor.

"So far as the onions went, he didn't lose any, because I made him admit they were all there when we left the station."

"What did he do to be arrested?"

"He had his pushcart on a cross-walk, and I told him to move it. He moved it until he was round the corner and then went back. I got a call from the Sergeant for letting him stay there."

"I went back and asked for his license, and he refused to show it. He said, 'Arrest me, pinch me, I dare you. I want to be arrested.' And so I gave him his wish."

"Do you want him punished, officer?"

"No, I have nothing against him as long as he behaves himself."

"Do you hear that, Morris? The officer was big-hearted enough to ask me to let you go."

Morris became chastened. Evidently he did not realize that a cop could do such a wonderful thing.

"Now tell him you're sorry, Morris; that you won't do it again, and shake hands."

Morris grinned, and seized willingly by the hand of the smiling policeman.

According to the charge read by Court Officer Jerry Creedan, Rose Lieberman was accused of "throwing a quantity of FAST TALKER refuse in the street AND WALKER in front of the house occupied by the defendant."

Rose admitted the charge, but gave so many excuses that the court stenographer was working overtime to keep up with her.

"Your Honor, Judge," said Rose, "I am a poor woman with seven children and a husband who hasn't worked for a long time."

"I might send you to jail for this," said His Honor, "but under the circumstance."

This was enough for Rose.

She smiled with gratification and proceeded to leave the court room.

The attendant stopped her and suggested that the Judge had a little more to say. Rose returned to the dock.

"But under the circumstances I find you guilty and am going to fine you the sum of 25 cents," continued the Judge.

Some questioning and search revealed the fact that Rose did not have the necessary quarter which stood between her and liberty.

"All right," concluded the Judge, "go home and don't do it again."

This time Rose disappeared before the Judge could have found time to change his mind.

"A mutilated penny is not a nickel," was the decision in Essex Market Court yesterday.

However, it was evident that a single penny can cause almost as much trouble as a bank robbery.

Max Hammer went into a store to telephone a friend on the east side. When he entered the booth he discovered that the necessary nickel was lacking and asked a friend of his to give him a coin to start the telephone system working.

The friend complied, not with a nickel but with a mutilated penny which he happened to have in his pocket. The penny was well hammered out, and so far as bell ringing and registering were concerned, it worked exactly as well as a 5 cent coin of the realm.

Max called his friend and dropped the penny into the slot. The bell rang, the connection was made and everything was going finely.

Unfortunately for Max, Inspectors McKenney and Hart of the New York Telephone Company were on the trail of those who try to telephone without a nickel. The two sleuths were at the time encamped in the rear of the store and were not only watching through a peep-hole but also had a connection made by which they could hear the conversation.

"How did you know that Max dropped in the mutilated penny?" asked the counsel for the defense.

"Because we had emptied the coin box and were waiting for something to happen."

In other words, Max was "framed" in a manner which would have done credit to the late Nick Carter.

The attorney for the defense admitted that things looked bad for Max, but urged his dismissal on the grounds that, outside of the telephone booth, Max was a reputable citizen and did not mutilate pennies for any reason whatever.

The Judge took the case under advisement and promised to render a decision concerning the fate of Max later on.

BOY SCOUTS AND 'OUR TEDDY'

Little Follows to See Filmed Life of Roosevelt To-Morrow.

The life and accomplishments of Col. Theodore Roosevelt are being told in motion pictures now at the 34th Street Theatre under the title of "Our Teddy."

This is the production which was finally approved by Col. Roosevelt just a few days before he died.

A part of the special programme arranged for the picture is an innovation in screen effect in the form of vocal interpolations by a quartet of returned wounded soldiers from one of the local base hospitals. The singers accompany a number of the scenes of the various episodes in the life of the former President with selections which were his favorites.

On Saturday morning 1,000 members of the New York Council of Boy Scouts will be the guests of the theatre at a special matinee for the school children of that district. The new Boy Scout band will give a concert preceding the performance and will also be included in the special Sunday performance as a part of the theatre's observance of Roosevelt Day.

FIGHTERS NEED AMUSEMENT

War Camp Community Asks Patriotic New Yorkers to Help.

The War Camp Community Service issued an appeal today for contributions of theatre tickets for American soldiers and sailors. The theatres donate 1,000 tickets each week and the Community Service buys an additional 1,000, but this is not nearly enough to supply the demand.

The tickets are wanted mainly for wounded men who have spent many joyous weeks with no amusements or recreation. Patriotic New Yorkers who want to help them are asked to send the tickets to the Theatre Ticket Distribution Department of the War Camp Community Service, No. 9 East 10th Street, or to have them at the Red Circle Hut in front of the Public Library.

BROTHERS ACCUSED OF ROBBING SAFE

David Miller Wore Stolen Watch When Arrested, Detective Says in Court.

David Miller, twenty-six, and his brother John, twenty-five, living at No. 178 Palmetto Street, Brooklyn, were arrested yesterday afternoon at Clinton Street and East Broadway, Manhattan, by Detective Claire of the Butler Street Station, Brooklyn. They were arraigned in the Adams Street Court on a charge of burglary, preferred by Samuel Gottlieb, a grocer, at No. 284 Court Street. He alleges that on Saturday or Sunday night the brothers entered his place, broke open the safe and took $3.50 in Liberty bonds and a gold watch. When arrested yesterday David Miller was wearing the watch. Detective Claire said: "The brothers were held in $1,000 bail each."

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Get a small bottle of Danderine at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little into your hand and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of this awful scurf will have disappeared. Two or three applications will destroy every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.—Advt.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY

She Kept Her Locks Dark and Glossy, with Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.—Advt.
